Aldermen Allege Perjury

ter and under the control of the mayor." The following statement was made by Councilman Matthews: "I feel that the parties signing these affidavits have perjured themselves, and I have taken the matter up along these lines. I consider it is up to them to prove their allegations. "The whole matter seems to have originated through the former fire chief, and possibly one or two others of the fire department. Former councilmen have let this same fire chief out, and this council considered it was necessary to do the same. The people and business men have been aware of it, and demanded the removal, therefore the council has taken such action as is also provided in the charter. "We have done what we could toward the support of Mayor Mason on this and other matters in order that we might all harmonize and work together. Apparently it has not met with the approval of some people, but if they give it due consideration and thorough investigation, I believe they will agree with us. "I don't expect these petitions will be signed up; neither do I expect that any person would care to accept the opposing nominations under these circumstances."

LONDON'S SUBWAY CRUSH AS BAD AS NEW YORK'S

United Press Service
 LONDON, April 4.—London's "Golders Green tube" (subway) grows more and more crowded as time progresses, just as the New York subway situation grows worse and worse with the development of the up-town residence district. In fact, the tube crush is terrific during the business hours.
 There was a tremendous jam at the Belsize Park station a few mornings ago. The guards packed passengers on until it was beyond human possibility to squeeze another soul into a car or onto a platform. More were still on the station platform.
 "You'll have to wait for the next train," said the guards, and the train sailed away. "That," said an American who witnessed the performance, "is the difference between the English and American methods. In New York they'd somehow have loaded on the overflow, too."

Mexican Aristocrats Are Begging for Work

United Press Service
 SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 4.—Hundreds of once wealthy Mexican aristocrats walk the streets of San Antonio today, pitifully eager for any kind of work, at any wage they can get.
 These men, women and children are divided into two classes: the shabby-genteel and the ragged. All of them were driven from broad acres and lives of luxury by sentences of death that today await their return to seething Mexico. They prefer to stay here and be poor.
 Other hundreds—there about 6,000 Mexican refugees here—were fortunate enough to bring gold with them when they fled from the land of too much trouble. They live in great style; and there are fashionable shops and exclusive places to live here that are supported largely by them.
 Most of these refugees, proud of their pure Castilian blood, new to poverty and its humiliations, sensitive to charity, will accept any employment to keep them from becoming public or private charges.
 A copy boy on one of the local American newspapers here, earning $6 per week, was, until the fall of Hurta, the petted son of a Mexican family of Tamaulipas whose boast was that their ranch was a day's horseback ride in length and breadth.
 Among this number are several hundred Catholic priests and other dignitaries of the church. Many of these exiles have been deprived of their estates through some whirl or other of the rapidly revolving wheel of Mexican fortune.
 Residents tell of highly educated graduates of Chapultepec Military Academy, the West Point of Mexico, former captains, majors and even colonels in the army of old Porfirio Diaz, who fled the country with him at his fall and who have refused to ally themselves with either Carranza or Villa, working as saloon porters, dish washers and irrigation ditch hands for a livelihood.
 These are the so called "reactionary" Mexicans, the tattered remnants of the once haughty and wealthy Cientifico class, whose control over Mexico was as absolute as was that of Louis XVI before the fall of the Bastille. The Bastille fell for Louis and Diaz died in a foreign land.
 In San Antonio today the refugees of the old regime have only the uncertain fortunes of Felix Diaz to pin their hopes of a "return" upon.
 What London was to the aristocratic emigre of the French revolution, San Antonio is to the banished aristocrat of Mexico. Today the best blood of the old regime is making San Antonio its home.
 Here the best of Mexican doctors, lawyers, professional men, former cabinet officers, ex-governors of Mexican states, one time ministers to foreign courts, landed proprietors of vast estates, are living. There are about 12,000 Mexican refugees in Texas.
